Great little space shooter, really smooth and comfortable to control.. After leaving a negative review and seeing the developers listened to the call of the people, saying that the price should be lowered, proves that this game is indeed a work in progress. For $5 it isn't that bad, but I felt as though the price should've been lowered even further, and later increased over time as the content of the game increased.

The gameplay: As of right now it is very dry, with no clear tutorial, thus leaving the gamer clueless and therefore disinterested. An improvement as well would be a day/night cycle, when the rake would leave marks on your house overnight, like in the other game, where overnight the rake smeared pig blood over your trailer, begging you to leave its territory. Also the shop dude and the other guy just outside the shack are frozen, they offer no dialogue or motion. As well, the gun animations no doubt are going to be added, hell, the only way you even know if you shot your gun is the SD sound that occurs when you left click, not via smoke or recoil. Hunting the Rake; it is nice having the detector, definitely adds to suspense, but when you actually find the Rake, one of two things happen, you shoot it and it runs away at light speed, or it kills you in one swing. This is really anti climactic, but it is not unfixable. Having more interaction with the Rake post confrontation, would really make finally seeing it a thing to be valued, therefore fixing the boringness of the Rake's current state.

My "Unbiased as possible opinion":

It is a good game, has good potential, so I will recommend it, BUT ONLY because of the future ahead of it, seeing that the devs will interact with the community and keep updating the game. Hopefully in due time, this game truly will become a great indie game, but like any other indie game, the beginning stages will always be rough around the edges. Also, any review that is negative because of the price, see that as positive, as the devs have already fixed that.

THIS GAME WILL BE GREAT. GIVE IT TIME.. This cute and endearing game instructs you to "tilt your device."

I tilted my monitor and nothing happened. Then I tried tilting my keyboard and mouse. I even tried tilting my coffee maker. Still nothing. Game must be broken.. It's okay, I've played worse. but i do like puzzle games.. Fantastic buy if multiplayer would work, cant see anyone on line but myself, even in this state though its worth what I paid for it.

Great soundtrack with a variety of different musical styles, with both dynamic and ambient music.

I'd say it is definitely worth the full price, and on a sale you are making a mistake not buying it!. And the purple blood flowed like wine...

Utopia 9 comes out of nowhere and adds itself to the list of alltime great twinstick shooters available on Steam. Ranking right up there with the newly released rogue twinsticks - Enter the Gungeon and Neon Chrome - Utopia 9 has a certian charm that makes it feel unique. The shooting mechanics feel very solid and are quite satisfying as aliens pop with a gory purple delight. Add in multiple firearms, melee weapons, mutations, a martian theme, and stylish graphics for the cherry on top. I'm really diggin it so far. Another interesting addition becomes hunting down the aliens that have killed your fellow tourists and exacting revenge. It's tough though because not only do th e aliens use fallen tourists weapons but they also become more powerful and heavily armored with each tourist they kill. IMO Utopia is only lacking an endless horde mode set in an open arena. I believe an arena mode is currently being considered by the devs so one can only hope! A+ title.. This is a fun but has the same issue of every frantic indie top down restart fest, where you are just going to hit a point where it feels less like you're playing a game and more like you're working through various permutations of enemy placement and AI decisions until you have a better chance at winning. Eventually you'll probably get tired of restarting or you'll beat it, once you do you won't play for score because it's not that great of a scoring game.

I wouldn't say it's designed horribly or has bad controls but it has an entirely unnecessary need to raise the stakes which simply push the game past the bounds of what actually made it good. In the early levels when it's simple it's very good. The later levels that add difficulty by having mobs of enemies, flamethrowers, and rocket launchers are not as good. Rather than sticking to what it does right it it decides it wants to be more hardcore toward the end.

You'll probably be impressed by this if you've never listened to Jazz before and have a higher threshold for annoyance than me. Ultimately you can probably play Doom(2016), listen to John Zorn and have a less frustrating experience.. Can PLEASE ANYONE tell me the controllrs?
please

. Enjoyable game until reaching Tuldigon level, which as another user pointed out is very difficult to complete. Please adjust difficulty for this level.

UPDATE

Ok I had to change my review, I don't think the Tuldigon level difficulty is right, despite what the devs said to the previous comment on this. I also watched the gameplay in "normal" difficulty but the video seems edited and I can't really see what the guy is doing.

I won't be playing again until this level is patched.. This game has much potential and the developers are very communicative but right now the game feels like early access and kinda unfinished. Right now there are 6 tracks and 6 cars which seem kinda unbalanced. There is also only one race mode, quick race, right now. If this games expands and gets better I will change my rating accordingly.

If you want to support the devs and the potential of this game buy it now - if you want a finished game and you would give up when you see some bugs, please wait and come back later.. my friend and I were joking around when he said "screw watch dogs! Imma play the wizards pen. (I have over 1,000 games). The game got addicting and we played for like an hour. pretty fun.
