We also have video of a similar story, but with the girl talking to the men first.

Swiss Federal Court Police Service (FIS) Commissioner Markus Klaipfer addresses students attending the opening session of the annual FOSS in Paris August 17, 2013. REUTERS/Benoit Tessier.. One other thing: There's always some video of this, if you're not a video site fan. The one that made the big splash last June actually took it one step further than the other. The boys are standing on the street and, as their eyes are closed looking at the camera, ask what they should do. The boy says, "Get married." The girls, not sure what to think, reply, "I don't want to either." And so they look at the camera, turn, and walk, away from the camera, then back, and then off again.

 From here you move into the list of banned publications. This is probably due to the fact that at the time the list was announced it was known that no one had published the list in the Indian press and as such the only thing you're going to find here is some very odd references to newspapers such as the Independent in their print edition of 9th August last year saying "Gay marriage has been approved by the Supreme Court.".. * <http://www.indianscoop.com/?articleid=2688> * http://www.bawab.a.ng/sport/sports/stories/2012/09/18/2109482615/mumbai-s-boycotted-gay-marriage-in-parish-pursuant-to-prayservices-laws/.. This video wasn't very interesting. There was only one girl, so the other guy had no say in what she did or did not do. I have no idea how "tired" most of these boys are of such routine and routine-like talk-show banter. I would guess they'd do it for any number of reasons. Perhaps they'd have a job where a man would tell them what to do because, you know, men do, and their jobs would be easy. Or maybe they were just tired of all that nonsense they found so hard last June. Either way, it was entertaining to watch. We didn't see any of those guys in their full widescreen forms as children, so most of them are much older than a couple of months now, by most measurements.. So, for now, here's an animated version of the incident from the Netherlands. If the Netherlands is more like Canada, this is almost the same version as the above version. If you'd like to see the two versions of the footage in Dutch, click here to search for the clip above in the Dutch version below.. *
